The M.Ed. in adult learning provides in-depth knowledge and understanding of adult learning theory and practice, specifically in the fields of human resource development, adult literacy, and exploring technology in learning in today’s digital environment.

The teaching and learning with technology concentration in the M.Ed. in adult learning program offers a unique opportunity to explore the ways in which technologies are changing how and where learning happens for adults. The three-course sequence begins with an examination of the theory and practice that informs e-learning, builds on that experience through a broad exploration of digital media tools and concludes with a solutions-based approach to instructional design challenges in e-learning for adults.

Application Requirements:

- VCU Graduate School online application
- Statement of intent
- Three letters of recommendation
- Transcripts from previous academic work
- At least a 3.0 GPA on last 60 hours of coursework
- Satisfactory GRE or MAT scores

Application deadline:

February 1 for Fall and Summer admission
November 1 for Spring admission

For more information, please contact:

Jenna Lenhardt, Ph.D.
Recruitment Specialist
soeinfo@vcu.edu

jlenhardt